

P O S T E R

WHEN NIGHT FALLS ON AQUILA'S PRIVATE ESTATE, THE ANDAMAN SEA SEPARATES YOU FROM THE ISLAND'S ONLY OTHER VISIBLE LIGHT SOURCE.

Posted on 15 November 2017.

From a string of elite private spaces all abounding in a small region of Kamala known as 'Millionaire Mile', The Aquila exceeds in sheer scale and splendour. Perched on 10,000 square metres of land, with 165 metres of ocean coastline, judging by size alone – this luxury villa is the point of difference. Seven bedrooms are divided into the main, master and guest pavilions, each serving a different purpose with its own characteristic flair. A wealth of amenities are offered at the main pavilion. Here, on-hand chefs cook locally sourced produce, bartenders shake, strain, and vintage wines age in a private cellar. Of the most notable comforts is the 30 metre cliff hanging infinity pool, personal movie theatre, fully equipped gym and kitchen, spa, craft on tap, and a velvet red pool table.

Tropical opulence is further notable in the pearl-white spiral staircase, a key feature balancing and enhancing its surroundings. Natural wood, glass panels and stretched window walls together with neutral-toned interiors render the space classy – all the while keeping harmony with existing environments.

A core requirement of The Aquila was that one's needs not be at the expense of the other. In the master pavilion, grand sliding doors glide to reveal Kamala's unique seascape. A silk sheet of tranquil blue is dotted by floating islands rumoured to have been inhabited by sea-gypsies. Today, many Andaman islands are home to nomadic tribes, of whom its members remain untouched by modern technologies. The private villa is secluded enough that you are free from all tourist hustle but close enough that if you so desire added exploration, Patong Beach, Surin Beach, Fanta Sea and renowned Laguna Golf are all a short drive away. A morning endeavor to Wat Chalong Temple and a night wander around Talad Kaset night market, is enough to put the inner traveller at ease. Designed to be the ultimate unwind. With a capacity of 100 people, The Aquila is ideal for large soirees, conferences, family escapes, or a week of exclusive island living. Visit the property here and book your super villa experience now.

